GOOD CROPS ON

Commissioner of Agriculture Pleased With Work

Raleigh, April 95.—Commissioner of Agriculture W. A. Graham, just back from the Edgecombe and the Pender county test farms, express gratification at the work being accomplished at both varieties of corn and cotton adapted to the soils in that territory are being developed on the Edgecombe farm. There has been developed there, also a variety of bur clover that reseeds itself for six years as a winter cover crop. Experiments there have also worked out methods of draining water galls that make serious inroads on available crop lands on many farms. This is only the third crop year for the Pender farm. Much new land is being cleared. One acre in lettuce has this spring already yielded a fevenue of $600. Truck and fruit crops are the experiments on this farm, the purpose being to discover and introduce the best methods of growing and handling for the benefit of farmers in that territory.
